

Happy Summer AP United States History students! In order to prepare for our course in the fall, I have a couple of things for you to do this summer.

1. Get the textbook and a notebook specifically for the course
2. Read chapter 1 of the text and take reading notes/practice active reading in your preferred manner! Any way that works for you is great. Devote your first page in the notebook to your own notes on chapter 1!
3. Throughout the course, we will be using a podcast called American History Tellers. You can find it here:
<https://wondery.com/shows/american-history-tellers/>
You can also download it in any podcast listening app you prefer.

Scroll down in the playlist until you find a series of episodes titled Revolution. It will look like this

Listen to Revolution: The Virginia Planter. In your notebook, devote a page of notes to this podcast. Explore specifically how this group was affected by the ideals of the Revolution.

Listen to Revolution: The Iroquois Diplomat. In your notebook, devote a page of notes to this podcast. Explore specifically how this group was affected by the ideals of the Revolution.

Listen to Revolution: The Independent Woman. In your notebook, devote a page of notes to this podcast. Explore specifically how this group was affected by the ideals of the Revolution.

Listen to Revolution: The Free Man. In your notebook, devote a page of notes to this podcast. Explore specifically how this group was affected by the ideals of the Revolution.

Respond in writing to the following prompt and share it with me at brittyn@crossroadscollegeprep.org

Prompt: Evaluate the ways in which the experience of the Revolution impacted American social groups of the 18th century.

4. Have a great summer! Stay active! Stay safe!
